Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

What to think about the controversies raging over American war planes as compared with other planes of the Allied squadrons, is somewhat puzzling. Alexander Seversky, who seems to know what he is talking about, says, for instance, that we have no fighter planes equal to the British Spitfires, or equal in climbing and altitude performance to the Japanese Zeros. The fact that many American pilots prefer to fly the Spitfires to our own fighters, indicates Seversky's statement in regard to British planes is true. The Spitfires are probably the best fighters in the war. So far as Zeros are concerned we are not so sure. The record of Zeros worsted in air battles with American pilots grows longer week by week, with losses of American planes comparatively rare. Perhaps altitude climbing abilities are secondary in the Pacific theatre.

One thing, however, which seems to emerge from the welter of argument, is that our pilots, bombadiers and navigators are generally better trained and more resourceful than most of their adversaries. In other words, the Americans are able to offset in a large degree the poor quality of their tools, by a high quality of skill and daring.

In the bomber division, it now seems demonstrated that while the big four motored bombers of the British can carry heavier loads of explosives, than the longer ranged American mobbers, they cannot rotect themselves so well and usually must be accompanied by a swarm of fighter planes. The American bombers carrying a lesser load of explosives have frequently demonsrated both in Europe and in the Pacific theatres their ability to shoot down attacking fighter planes. The Japs have suffered so greviously from this offensive faculty of American bombers and bomber crews that the Zero planes now give them a wide berth.

Seversky's sharp criticcism of American planes, is, of course, salutary and constructive. It becomes apparent however, that the production of planes that, in design and effectiveness, lag behind some of the newer types used by enemy or ally, is a cardinal fault of the mass production system. Mass production requiring all manner of machine tools, ceases to be mass production the moment constant changes are introduced in patterns. New designs call for changes in machine tools and such changes require time. It would seem as if one great plant could be used solely for experimental purposes. When a new plane design meets a new aerial combat problem satisfactorily, machine tools could be immediately designed for mass production and moved into producing plants without too much delay along the assembly line.

But this failure in producing planes equal to, or better than those used by the enemy, has, perhaps, given America its rudest jolt. The thought that we are sending our intelligent, highly trained boys out against an aerial enemy with inferior machines and equipment, is enraging. All the salve, the bombast, and the boasting of army or navy brass hats, will not reconcile the American people to a heedless waste of our heroic aerial fighting forces.

We need more air-minded men in top places of authority in this war. The Iowa, new mastodon battleship of 45,000 tons has just been launched. There is a lot of ballyhoo about its impregnability. But almost anybody can remember what hapnened to the Prince of Wales in the China Sea, or to the Bismarck in the North Sea. The only thought one can have about the Iowa, is in fact, a prayer. It may be lucky.

The group leaving on September 15th will be entertained by Hydraulic Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, of Nevada City. Walter S. Johnson of Nevada City and Richard M. Dixon will be the acting corporals in charge of the soldiers, who are, in addition to Johnson and Dixon:

Tire Ration Executives Give Inspiring Message To Group Here

The tire rationing boards of Truckee, Nevada City and Grass Valley held a joint meeting Thursday night at the National Hotel and were addressed by Kenneth R. Lowell, tire executive officer in charge of tire rationing in Northern California and Herbert Kendall, field executive. The meeting was preceeded by a dinner.

Earlier in the day Lowell addressed the Nevada City Rotary Club as the guest of Jack Osborne, coordinattor of Nevada County and was conducted on a tour of inspection to Camp Beale by Osborne and George Calanan of the local tire ration board, that the condition of the road and its relation to tire destruction be called to his attention. It was significant that while on the trip several cantonment workers' cars were observed traveling at a speed in excess of 45 miles per hour.

Lowell's visit here was an inspiration to the members of the local boards, which have looked forward to such a meeting since organizing. A forceful speaker, Lowell knew all the answers to questions bombarded at him by the ration board members and solved many problems that were submitted. The ration board members were impressed with his directness and he earned the respect of both the Rotary Club members and the ration board members.

The following highlights of his information in order to qualify for tires are submitted for the benefit of this newspaper's readers:

In order to qualify for tires you must be engaged in work that is vital to the war effort, the public health or safety.

Regardless of the state law, school busses would have to use retread tires.

Public officials who use their cars to travel to and from their offices or for personal uses are no longer eligible for tires.

Parents of children who apply for tires to transport their children to meet the school busses are not eligible.

Those who have two automobiles must wear out the tires on both cars before they become eligible for tires and then they must have the qualifications set forth above.

Pooling of trucks in rural areas to serve each other must be done and all cars of cantonment workers who have been granted tires must be fully loaded.

The destruction of casings, or wilful abuses of rubber through carelessness, overloading or speeding is prohibited and is punishable by disqualification for tires.

If one has a truck that has to be recapped and the owner cannot at the moment obtain a certificate, he should leave the truck idle until he does obtain one. The tire ration board of San Francisco tied up the truckers who are building the streets in Camp Beale for 48 hours due to overloading.

Lowell pointed out the critical situation regarding rubber in the United States. The army has had to use steel treads on tanks. The steel tread wear out in 1,000 miles whereas rubber runs six to eight thousand miles and increases the speed of the tank six to eight miles per hour.

Stickers are to be provided and placed on all cars which are granted tires, the stickers stating the fact that the car is run on ration rubber.

At the conclusion of the meeting with Lowell and Kendall a vote of thanks was given the two ration officials. Lowell was formerly sales manager for an auto firm in San Francisco and Kendall was an aviator in the last war, in which he was wounded and interned in Germany for a long period.

The two rubber ration officials left for Marysville after they enjoyed an overnight stay with Coordinator Osborne.

ENOUGH BUTANE GAS FOR PRESENT USERS, SAYS LEGG

George Legg, head of the Glenbrook Gas Co., who has just returned from a special trip to Long Beach to find out what the future holds for butane gas and its users, states that he was assured by President McCartney of the Liquified Petroleum Gas Corporation that there will be adequate amounts of butane gas for all present users, but that the federal authorities have forbidden all installations for new or additional users of butane.

GRASS VALLEY TIED WITH CHICO

Grass Valley defeated Oroville, 5 to 0 yesterday and the Marysville Giants trounced the Chico Colts 15 to 2, placing Grass Valley and Chico in a tie for first place with Marysville one half game behind in the Sacramento Valley League standings.

Mrs. Eddy was formerly employed at the Nevada City Sanitarium as a nurse.

She was born in Nevada City in September, 1860 and spent all her life in this community.

James Dolan Death Shock To Residents

The funeral rites have been set for 10 o'clock tomorrow (Tuesday) morning at the St. Canice Catholic Church here for James Dolan, 69, prominent Nevada City resident whose sudden demise Saturday night came as a shock to relatives and friends.

A rosary service will be held tonight at the Holmes Funeral Home.

Dolan w,hose acquaintances probably numbered more than any resident of the city, had visited relatives in San Francisco last week and returned to Nevada City late Saturday.

At 9 o'clock Saturday night he went to get a drink of water and collapsed in the kitchen. His death was believed to have been instantaneous, caused by a sudden heart attack.

Dolan had been a resident of Nevada City for more than 40 years. He was a native of San Francisco and while a young man entered the employ of the telephone company. He graduated to the position of wire chief and held that important post for years. Upon his retirement by the telephone company he operated the bus line from Nevada City to Grass Valley. Later he joined in partnership with J. B. Grissel in the operating of a clothing store where Bolton's is now located. The two men sold out several years ago.

Several months ago Dolan's wife died. Her death seemed to take something out of his life and friends anticipated a short life for him because he often remarked that he had nothing for which to live.

Shortly after retiring from the clothing store business Dolan underwent an operation for the removal of one leg. He recovered sufficently to resume normal life with an artificial leg.

Dolan was a member of the advisory board of the Nevada County Selective Service Board.

The funeral rites will be followed by burial in the Pine Grove Cemetery beside his wife.

Surviving relatives of the deceased include a brother, George Dolan and a sister, Mrs. Will Walthers of San Francisco. Mrs. Mary Guenther, his aged mother in law, also survives.

Harlan is in the Miners Hospital here recovering from a operation.

WAR POLITICS— AND TIME

(From the New York World-Telegram)

We obtained permission from the author to republish below a letter to a congressman. We think it eloquently speaks volumes in this perilous period, when time is so tragically precious and when so many vital things to be done are being left undone because they are being put off "until after election." The letter:

This letter is democracy at work. This letter represents what we are fighting for. This letter is the first I have ever written to you or to any government official.

For years I have sat back and watched selfish little individuals and pressure groups write, telegraph or travel to Washington to ask favors.

For years I have wanted to write or to ask you for just one favor—good, honest government for me and for all the people.

But I wondered what my one lone letter—just like my one lone vote—could do. So I didn't write. I didn't ask.

Now at long last I am stirred up—the cause is so vital that I am writing my first letter—asking my first favor. It is this:

You don't realize how much more willing I am to make sacrifices to win this war than you think I am, and that goes for millions of Americans like me who have yet to write their first letter. You underestimate us.

So get us straight!

Vote that $6,000,000,000 tax bill that doubles my income tax.

Withhold 5 per cent—10 per cent—of my savings next year.

Make War Savings Bonds compulsory. (I am already investing 11 per cent of my salary).

Put a ceiling on wages and all prices.

Ration my gas—take my spare tire—take my car if you need it.

Ration my food—my clothes—my fuel. My greatgrandfather got along on what I waste.

Help Leon Henderson—he's got a tiger by the tail. Help him hold it or it will eat us all.

For once in your life, forget the folks back home. Vote a clear, firm "Yes" if it will win the war. Let us be your only test.

Do this and you won't have to worry about re-election for the duration.

This letter is democracy at work—a private citizen with no axe to grind—telling you not how to vote, but telling you how he feels so that you may know better how to represent him.

This letter is from a plain citizen with two children, a mother, a job and a home, and a long-neglected right to express the way he'd like to be governor.

There are 10,000,000 like me in the United States. We will decide the election this fall. Don't underestimate us. You vote as courageously as we are willing to sacrifice and nothing in this world can stop us.

With utter sincerity,

WILLARD V. MERRIHUE.
Scotia, N. Y.

WHILE OUR HOMES STILL STAND

War with all its horrors, its ever increasing demand for personal sacrifice, its restriction of individual rights, has cast a shadow over our country. No section, town, village, city or hamlet can escape its demands, demands that affect the lives of all of us. Yet we here in America have not felt the full potency of total war, at least many of our inland towns and cities will be secure from the scourge of the enemy. But this does not mean that we can ever allow ourselves to deviate one iota from the avowed purpose of total victory. To achieve this, we must work, sacrifice, and bend every effort individually and collectively to contribute our efforts where they are vitally needed to win the war.

In every home in America, without exception, there are things that have long outlived their usefulness. True, they may be wrapped in memories—delightful mementos of children at play. John's first tricycle, Mary's doll carriage, the skates that Bill learned on. These are only things—things that have passed their utilitarian value, that we are asked to give as scrap. They aren't scrap to us. They mean something in our lives. But our homes are still standing here. Over there they have a different kind of scrap . . . they have the beams that used to support the steeple of their church, the iron rails that little hands used to grasp to help them up the stairs. Yes—they have much more scrap of that kind than we, but let us give the scrap in our homes—and not the scrap of our homes.

JUST WONDERIN'

I wonder about mountains now,
Whose shining crests of light
Reach up to pierce the vaulted blue
And touch the stars of night,
While in dark jungles down below,
The wild beasts rage and witch fires glow.

I wonder if the tide of battle is beginning to turn in favor of the allied nations and if presently, we shall find ourselves confronted with the task of creating the new world of peace and justice we visualize today.

I wonder about those first days of peace following the holocaust of war. How will the democracies go about clearing the rubble and laying sturdy and dependable foundations for the world that is to be?

We hear much "talk about it and about", but remembering the mistakes made after the first world war, I'm hoping that when the war drums are again muted, America will be in the mood to step right up and take a prominent and constructive part in the work of rehablitation.

Bringing order out of chaos and establishing peace and decency in a disrupted world will be a stupendous task. How can we prepare for its accomplishment? Wars come and go, but old human nature remains to be reckoned with —"aye, there's the rub."

Have we learned the lessons of history? Have we profited spiritually by the trials and sacrifices of the present world war? Are we ready to enter into and take possession of a world of peace? Let's examine our individual minds and see.

There will be no room for intolerances, racial or religious, in the world we hope to build. Sentiments of selfishness and greed, will blot the page we strive to write, disloyalty and disunity are forces that may prevent the erection of our temple of peace; distruct and suspicion will inevitably foil our efforts. Will we be able to eradicate these destructive forces before peace comes with problems far greater than those of war? Can we win the day with the equipment we have on hand, or shall we begin right now to discard the old obstructions and replace them with constructive powers free from superstitions, ignorance and intolerances which have led to so many cataclysms in times past and will, if not curbed, lead to yet another time of trouble and a recurrence of all that the world has suffered at the hands of implacable and ruthless foes.

No sane man would choose a home in a beast infested jungle in preference to one upon a mountain, or in a sunlit valley. Well, there are mountain crests, fair valleys and dark jungles in the human mind and each individual may choose where his thoughts shall dwell. Of course we —you and I, have completely destroyed our mental jungles—Yes? Still, at times a stray jungle beast strays into our minds, to fill us with dismay and prompt swift and drastic action. The fact that the unwelcome visitor gained even momentary entrance, puts us on alert and that is as it should be. Eternal vigilance is the price of right mindedness, and right mindedness is needed now and will be needed when peace returns to a distraught world, as it has never before been needed since homo sapiens learned to walk upright.—A. Merriam Conner.

THE DIM-OUT

News in Rhyme Over KJBS Daily at 12:30

Written by Harley M. Leete, Jr.

Hey! Is that you there?
Can't see a single thing. I'll swear!
Can't see what I want to find—
This dim-out has me almost blind.
Those street lights couldn't be much dimmer:
From signboards not a single glimmer.
Stand back—to let that auto go—
You can't see it, but it's going slow.
I understand that wrecks and such,
On dimmed-out streets have decreased much.
Pardon me, was that you toe?
Can't see exactly where I go.
Ouch! I'm stepping on my feet!
Say—are we on Market Street?
Looks more like the Gayway's
Tunnel of Love,
Black as the Ace of Spades above.
What a boon when spooners park;
The whole town is in the the dark!
Look—some fool left on his lights—
Does he want the Japs to win the fight?
Any Jap that's hunting for this town,
Will run out of gas and be forced down.
The glow emitted to the sky,
Isn't enough to reach the human eye.
'Twould practically foil a Jap attack—
They'd only see one color—black!
It's sort of awkward stumbling
'round,
Tripping on curbs and unlit ground:
But frankly, I'm glad to do my part,
And dim-out right from the very start.
We'll dimmer-out with good success.
Say, just a second, is this Van Ness?
It's what? Ouch! Union Square!
I hit the statue's base right there.
Well—we still know what we have to do—
Just stick it out and see it through!

So far as this war has revealed the power of air forces, it seems quite true, that air power alone cannot seize and hold enemy territory, though t did so, in a limited area, namely, the island of Crete. But most intelligent observers do believe that air power can so cripple the enemy, by wrecking transportations systems, manufacturing and electric plants, troop concentrations, and, on the sea, merchant and naval vessels unprotected by air craft, that the enemy falls easy victim to land or naval forces. That much almost anybody can learn from this war. It is about time, in line with that lesson that our war leadership began to give practical demonstration of understanding it.

SCHENECTADY, Sept. 7.—Private Warren Aaltman of Brookline, Mass. now some place in Pacific 15,000 miles from home, experienced the "miracle of miracles" he declared, when he heard his mother's voice, sending greeting to him in a short-wave program originating in Boston and broadcast over General Electric short wave stations. Salute to the MEN and WOMEN of CIVILIAN DEFENSE should WAR come home... they're Ready!

This war will be won by the spirit of the American people. This spirit is in the young men of our armed forces. It is the spirit of clean-living, clear-eyed, hard-hitting American youth. It is also in the spirit of unselfish sacrifice of personal time and energy by all who must remain on the Home Front. In tribute to the latter, we salute the men and women of Civilian Defense.

Who are these men and women? They are your friends and neighbors whose days are active and whose nights are given to the half-hundred activities of Civilian Defense.

In this work it is natural that many employees of this company take active part. As workers in public utility service they have special adaptabilities valuable to vital branches of Civilian Defense.

Likewise, there are many men who through long years of experience have developed special skills essential in keeping the output of gas and electricity flowing at top speed so that war plant production may run ahead of schedule.

Already more than 1,200 of the young men of this company are in the armed forces. Each month this total grows.

In Civilian Defense are more than 4000 company employees—nearly forty per cent of the total number.

In the mountain regions, close by the great power plants, hundreds of these men and women are Airplane Observers.

Men and equipment of this company are enlisted in Demolition and Clearance Crews, Bomb Squads, Auxiliary Firemen, Feeding and Housing, Rescue Squads, Road Repair Crews, Air Raid Wardens and many other activities.

We are proud to be part of this army at home. It is the people's army — sober, serious, trained and ready for Public Service.

Tahoe Forest Reports Very Few Violations Of Fire Regulations

Fire Chief Marc Edmonds of the Tahoe National Forest today commended forest users for their apparent fire consciousness, after the completion of a study of forest fire reports. Although forest travel and use has been on a par with the 1941 level, very few violations of fire regulations have been reported. Edmonds study showed the majority of the twenty two man caused fires which have occured to date, were preventable had good judgment and care been used. In conjunction with the opening of the dove season, Edmonds urges prospective hunters not to be misled by the recent crisp mornings into believing that a fire hazard no longer exists and that care with fire may be relaxed, while in fact the rising wind dries out grass and the foliage and only aggravates an already serious condition. According to Edmonds, some of the Tahoe forest's most disastrous fires have occurred in the early fall months, caused in many cases by the relaxation of fire prevention measures on the part of forest users.

Zoologist Debunks Rattlesnake Lore

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 3. — Debunking a great deal of snake lore, Dr. Raymond B. Cowles declares that rattlers do not always give warning before they strike, especially when one comes suddenly upon them, and coiling is not necessary in oder to bite.

Associate professor of zoology on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California, Dr C.owles further says that the tales of hypnotism by snakes have no scientific foundation. Most of them, he believes, arise from cases where the prey becomes immobile as a means of escaping detection. Birds may lack, perfected binocular vision, and thus may be unable sufficiently to judge distances in the case of a stealthy approach by cats and snakes. Therefore, they appear to tolerate dangerous proximity.

A rattlesnake will seldom if ever make an unprovoked attack upon a human being, despite fantastic tales to the contrary. The king snake, supposedly the rattler's mortal enemy, appears to attack and consume them only on rare occasions. He is immune from venom, but so are most other snakes. A blindfolded rattler can detect the approach of a king snake by odor, and a man or other mammal by the change of temperature as well.

"The old tale that the mate of a killed snake comes to avenge it is explained on the basis of scent. In the mating season, the trail of the snake killed may be readily followed. The revenge idea is nonsense."

According to Dr. Cowles, six foot rattlers in California are largely mythical. The skin of a dead snake can be stretched, making a six foot skin of a five foot snake, he says. A road runner killng a rattlesnake with cactus thorns is another absurdity.
